Onto county is not permanently lost to be Democracy,—Register.

The Democracy seems to be "perma-neatly lost" to Ohio county, which is about the same thing. When people are dead and buried we speak of them as lost," and so with parties.

THE Register was quite correct when it said after the October elections in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indians, that they settled the question of the presidency. We doubt its equal accuracy when it expresses Connecticut

Maina the belief that West Virginia has gone for GREELEY by ten thousand majority.

The reports with regard to the falling condition of Chief Justice Chase's health are only too reliably confirmed by his nearocistes. The grave statement is made, that, unless he ceases entirely from mental labor, his decease may be almost momentarily looked for. It is still insisted that he will make a trip to the Pacific Coast before the winter season.

In will be observed that the returns re-ceived are mainly from the Northern States which, in every calculation that has been made in reference to the Presidency, have been conceded to Grant-

Does the Register mean to say the Liberal and Democratic papers did not claim Indians, New Jersey, New York, New Hampshire and Connecticut? And it so does it expect anybody to believe it, when every reader of newspapers knows

A War Cloud in Europe. There is unquestionably a cloud on our horison. It is as yet no larger than the Czar's hand, but that is rather a large and the latest general elections held. The direction of India. For a long time south Cxrolina are incomplete, and the the direction of India. For a long time the English people have been apprehensive that Russia had designe upon her Indian possessions, and the matter has been very anxiously discussed. The cry of "woit," with which all who suggested danger ahead were met for a year after the Crimean war, has not been so prompt and loud since Russia tore up the treaty which withheld her from the Black Sea, and in a moment annulled the whole result of that war. And now the news that a Russian army is marching to the Oxus, with a moral certainty of becoming speedily possessor of Khivan, comes to respeedily possessor of Khivan, comes to re speedily possessor of Anivan, comes to re-mind England that to fight Russia is to play the part of the warrior in an old fable who slays a monater only to see it piece itself together again—like Night after Apollo's arrows of light have destroyed The swiftness with which this move ment has followed the meeting of the three Emperors at Berlin is one of the most unpleasant features of it. That Prussia and Austria have promised aid and comfort to Russia in the East provided she will let alone the West, is, of courses were observed the second and the second and the second and the second are the second and the second are second as the second and the second are second as the second and the second are second as the second as the second are second as course, a very obvious theory. But no explanation of that kind is needed for the sian movement. The helplessness of nee is enough to explain that, as it may become the explanation of many another movement. Russia does not fear Eng-land unallied with France, and it she is land unalised with France, and if she is ever to satisfy her Oriental aspirations, undoubtedly now is the promising moment. The question, what to do, is already being discussed here. England has long made up her mind never to go into war again, except purely on the defensive. But what is the defensive? Is it, in this case for expendent or the strength of the stren in this case for example, to wait until the Czar has brought his power to the very door of English India, and thus introduced the himself in a powerful position, holding the Turcomans his vassals, and a fruitful declaration of the common terms of the Turcomans his vassals, and a fruitful land ready to furnish him endless supplies? To conquer the Valley of the Oxus would be to the Czar, in an attack on India, worth five hundred thousand soldiers. With a feeling that the fate of her Indian empire is really trembling in the balance at this moment, and a deep conviction that she must ultimately have a struggle with a powerful enemy on the borders of Affghanistan, England will still, I think, decline to go to war at present. The evil day will be shoved off as long as possible. The defense of India is the only thing ever likely to cause England to go to war ever likely to cause England to go to war again. The people could not, I believe, be made to engage in earnest war for Cassada, Jamaica, Gibraltar, or even Australia; but assuredly they would defend their power in India to the last. They their power in India to the last. They look upon that country as the crown of their historical greatness. I once saw Professor Haxley point to tiny England on the map, and then to vast India, to note the fact that one ruled the other, as a guage of the supremacy of intellectual civilization over the might of manifold numbers.—M. D. Conway in Cincinnati Commercial.

Estrange Instance of Presentiment.

Overonown Hoos.—There is not one single advantage to be claimed in favor on early absent from home and stopping in the city, relates to us that after retiring to bed night before last and before going to sleep, he seemed all at once to be in a room at home. Everything about the room seemed as real and tangible as if he were that moment in it. It could not be a dream, because he had never for a moment lost his consciousness. Upon a bed in the room lay his brother, apparently very pale, and leaning distress. All day yesterday he could not banish the incident from his mind, and last night came thas sequel. He received a letter from home saying that his brother had fallen from a high window, and ever since had lain in an unconscious state in the room which he had so plainly seen the night before, and that his mother had scarcely left his bedside. We have this information from a gentleman of intelligence and a disbeliever in all spiritual manifestations.
